

Hey Parents! Tonight's drop-in we watched the documentary "Living on One Dollar." It is a documentary that follows three American students who go to Guatemala and live on a one dollar a day salary. It is meant to focus on those living in poverty and sharing their struggles. Their journey is incredible and is one that I would highly recommend watching the documentary. Below are some questions that will help you talk about our night.

1. What was one thing that they learned from the documentary?
2. How did they see the guys who made the film change as the documentary progressed?
3. What was something from the documentary that surprised them or was shocking to them about the filmmaker's experience?
4. How was the movie similar and different from the experiences they have had working with those who live in poverty?
